Customer Reviews

Tyler Nals picks right up with all the great set-up from the first and is able to hone in on some masterful lessons and smart skill-sets that help prepare you to take your poker to a profit. The book is loaded with all new smart strategies that take aim right at increasing your odds of turning up a winner when youâ ™re at the tables. Iâ ™m not looking to become a professional player, I just wanted to stop the beating I take, almost every time weâ ™re playing. You have to read the chapter on the most dangerous player at the poker table, some of the best moves you can make are outlined here. I couldnâ ™t believe all the techniques and approaches and weâ ™ve been hitting the cards trying to get a feel for all the strategies, itâ ™s the only way to learn all of them, and a good excuse to play. A great read that will have you excited to get out and hit the tables.

More in depth on strategic play, money management. I liked the stories at the end. For me it was a great book, and improving my game is important. You have to put time on and off the felt. This is a good read for a good player working the kinks out in his game.

After reading all three of Tyler's books on poker strategy - Poker Blog, Poker Notes, and Perfect Range - I wanted to share some situations that he mentions in these books that are 100% true during cash, and tournament games: Paired board bets on the flop: Tyler's comments focus on why someone would bet a paired board if they hit it? Simple logic to a situation that I've encountered during my play this year. In the past, I've always tended to fold to the bettor on the flop; not anymore. This same logic also applies to a flop that has all the same suit.- Table Talk: This is something that happened to me during a 1-2 NL cash session at Horseshoe Southern Indiana this past April. I was seated at a table with several of the the "Old guy" regulars. After a couple of orbits, the one seated to my left struck up a conversation with me. It was in regards to the condition of the poker room, and how much of a dump it was (Which it is not!). He then finished by saying how there's fleas in the carpet there. I thought to myself; Flea's? Really? I immediately caught on to this, laughed a little, and kept on playing. After a few more hands, I turned the tables, and brought back up the flea story by saying to him that, "I'd rather have flea's than what I had last month." He asked what I had, and I said I caught crabs from a bad sexual experience. He didn't believe me of course, but I had his attention, and ultimately convinced him I did, which made him uncomfortable. He lasted for about another hour then left. Touche' Mr. Nitty, Old Guy!Like Tyler, I too like being a prick at the table.....You have too. It's part of the game, and sometimes the best part of the game. These are a couple of great examples of table dynamics that should always be part of your focus. His comments on pre-flop bet-sizing is very true also, not only for cash games, but tourney's as well. Keep on grindin'!
