Funny and heartfelt, delightful and captivating. When she loses her daily planner and has to buy a new one, MJ Marggraff realizes she can fill it up with all the same committee meetings and other school and household commitments or she can use these blank pages as the opportunity to pursue a life long dream. In this true story, MJ Marggraff successfully brings us into her experience of both what it takes to become a pilot and the transcendent joy of flying. And even more than the story of flying, this is the story of MJ Marggraff's personal journey with its ups and downs, risks, challenges, and triumphs. It is the story of three friends, the Chicks in Charge, supporting each other as they navigate middle age and come to know each other in new and more meaningful ways. It is the story of a wife and mother finding her balance as she adds another job title, pilot. Most of all it is an invitation for each of us to follow our dreams. Since reading this book, I have been revisiting my own childhood dreams. I am inspired to claim the life I want; to engage my own persistence and determination to make that dream come true. And I can't wait for MJ Marggraff's next book to hear where her flying and her dreams take her next.

Although I am only in to the first few chapters of MJ's new book, I can say, I have already had so many personal epiphanies. For so many years, I was the Mom with the day planner that was so crammed full of "things that must be done" I had to color coordinate the items to insure the most important ones were completed by end of the day. I could so relate to losing that planner and feeling lost. Then there is the poem about the dragon and I have read and re-read it so many times. Many words of wisdom in that short passage. This book is for anyone who tucked that dream in the back of their mind, thinking it is too late to start the journey - MJ's story shows us it is never too late and I know many people are going to be impacted by her journey. KUDOS!!

I only wish that I had read this book when I was in my 40's! It is an interesting, fast read that is truly motivating. MJ describes her life that was lacking in excitement because she was living for everyone else and not herself. Then, she turned things around and began living one of her dreams -- being a pilot! She describes her feelings of discomfort and her fears but rises above both! This is a must read for any person who has that nagging feeling that there is something else out there in life!

As a mother of two teens, I related to MJ's story of being a stay at home mom and volunteering many hours at school. Having teens still in school as well as aging parents I have found myself looking deeper into the subject of chasing your dreams and having no regrets in life. I enjoyed MJ's accounts of her learning to fly and her ongoing commitment to her friends and family. Her story is inspiring and shows that life and dreams are what you make of them. Because of her stepping out of her comfort zone and learning to fly she has opened many doors to rewarding adventures. I very much enjoyed this book and didn't want her stories to end.

You know a book is good when you don't want it to end. This is how I felt when I read MJ Marggraff's book, Finding the WOW! This true story makes you laugh out loud, cry and rejoice. Her emergency landing left me... breathless and her unrelenting courage... speechless. This book will inspire you to revisit your current or long-forgotten dreams and may just give you the extra dose of courage you need to make your dreams come true.

This is an inspirational true story about a mid-life "soccer mom" who followed her dream to become a pilot while navigating the turbulence from the ups and downs of everyday life. While pursuing her passion, she had to overcome fears, self-doubts, skeptics and chauvinists while allaying the worries of her family and keeping them first and foremost in her life. MJ also emphasizes the importance of having strong friendships to get through thick and thin. I especially enjoyed her very descriptive and funny comments about her plane and her training flights....I felt like I was right up in the air with her!

Not enough books in this world are written by women about their success, their dreams achieved and continued. We as women tend to leave the bravado and self-marketing to men. But it was so inspiring, and refreshing, and funny and sad at times, to read Finding the Wow. I have a confession to make... I do not have a huge unachieved goal in my life. I am still working a part-time job. Although my daughters are young adults, I know I am still a big part of their lives. I plan more and more traveling adventures with my husband, as our lives are getting more and more free of day to day requirements... But this book did not make me feel like a failure because I do not work toward an outside of the box goal. This book made me feel happy to read about a spirited woman who conquered a lot and learned a lot. It did make me think that whatever our goals in life are, whether small or big, as long as you work toward them, as long as you enjoy what you do and keep doing it, as long as you continue to be an active part of society, the Wow will still trickle and make you feel like you want to get up in the morning... Because it is a big wide world out there, and it is worth marveling at it every day.
