Customer Reviews

If you are an avid craps player like I am, this book doesn't tell you too much you don't already know. Stand next to the stickman, set the dice the same way, throw them softly the same way, hit the same spot everytime, and you have a greater chance at beating the casino. Duh! Easier said than done, and the book does say to practice a lot. That's fine. But the most annoying things about this book are the continuous plugs the buy more stuff! Dan Pronovost's Smart Craps software (referenced 8 times), Golden Touch DVD (4 times),[...] website (13 times), Frank Scoblete's Craps Underground book (6 times) and Beat the Craps out of the Casino book (4 times), among others, PLUS there are 32 pages in the back with ordering information! Call this phone number for the DVD. Need a practice table? Want to attend a Golden Touch seminar? How do I buy Smart Craps? How about Golden Touch Blackjack, Golden Touch Texas Holdem or Golden Touch Video Poker, while we're at it? Need a list of books and tapes by Frank Scoblete? GIVE ME A BREAK!! Since I didn't learn anything while being bombarded with ads, I give this book a solid ONE star.

The casinos of America must hate Frank Scoblete and Dominator because they have shown a step by step way to get the edge at craps through both pictures and words in this new book. Or maybe the casinos love them because many people may try this and also fail at it. The book explains the physical elements of dice control. How to set the dice, where to stand at the table, how to grip the dice, swing your arm properly and throw the dice. It shows how the dice hit the table with a backspin that retards their forward motion and how they hit the back wall and die. I became interested in this when I read about the Captain's 147 hand roll in Atlantic City and I bought the book to see if there was anything to it. I have been practicing now for several months and using my SRR which means Sevens to rolls ration I now have cut down on the appearance of the seven. I have won on most of my trips to the casinos since my practice sessions have begun and even though I don't win every time the difference between my performance before this book and after it is like night and day. I know Scoblete has written many books on gambling but this has to be his finest because if you are a craps player you should get it right away and start practicing.

I started reading Scoblete a few months ago when I picked up a copy of the revised edition of "Beat The Craps Out Of The Casino". I then continued on with "Forever Craps" and finally, this GTC book. What has always impressed me about Mr. Scoblete's writing is that he is very much a straight shooter: he doesn't try to come up with crazy progressive betting schemes. He eschews 90% of the table bets offered, like any knowledgeable player of craps should. And he knows how to make a good blend of storytelling and practical information. Do not think that this is as simple as card counting (Or at least, as simple as GTC Speed Counting, which is like child's play). Dice control is a very involved, intense physical skill, requiring daily practice. Like golf, if you want to do it at the absolute peek of perfection, you will probably need to spend several hundred dollars on training seminars and practice equipment (or build your own if you are handy. The rubber pyramids alone though are pricey). Mr. Scoblete makes no false promises. He wholeheartedly admits that most players will lack the discipline to become an advantage player. But what he does discuss makes perfect sense. Just picking up the dice and making a hundred throws at home, I can already see the power that the right grip and the right dice set can have, as opposed to any lunk who picks up "them bones" and just flings them willy-nilly at the back. Avery Cardoza's works are good for a beginners primer. But if you want to take your play from "skilled, but ultimately losing" to "very skilled, and ultimately winning", "Scobe" is the man to go to.

There are many books on craps and some books on controlled shooting but this is far and away the best one. Frank Scoblete who has written a number of great craps books and his partner Dice Dominator have put together a book that shows you one step at a time how to get an edge at the game of craps using the Golden Touch Craps dice control method. There are about a hundred excellent pictures in the book and also excellent advice on betting on yourself once you have achieved some level of control and also just as important how to deal with the regular "random" shooters at the table. To win at craps you have to have a controlled throw, the "Golden Touch," but you have to bet properly using that throw and also not lose your money on the other players. The book also has some words of wisdom from the Captain, the world record holder with a roll of 147, and most of the Golden Touch Craps dice control experts such as Stickman and Bill Burton. If you are interested in beating the game of craps then this is the book to get. Having read them all I can tell you buy this one and don't waste your money on anything else. I also note that Scoblete has had many rolls in the 50s and one roll that went to 89 and Dominator has also had great rolls. This tells me that these guys are the real deal and it shows in the book, a truly great book and one that is well written, clear and completely understandable.
